

REV. CHRIS COLLINS

C O U N C I L M A N - W A R D 2

Rev. Chris Collins is a proud Camden native, pastor, and community leader. He is the founder of the Anointed News Journal, a faith-based newspaper that shares positive stories and has reached readers in over 10 countries. For more than 25 years, he has trained people in job skills, leadership, and business, helping thousands of youth and adults build better futures.

Before joining City Council, Rev. Collins worked in marketing and helped connect businesses, nonprofits, and government groups. He has served as a mentor, chaplain, and coach, and even worked with the NFL Retired Players Association.

He is a board member for several local organizations and helps lead the Camden Community Action Team. Rev. Collins has received many awards for his service, including a letter of recognition from President Barack Obama. He and his wife raised four children, all graduates of Penn State University. He holds a Master's in Theology and Biblical Leadership.
