Misinformation about Spay/Neuter

Myth: I cannot afford to have my pet spayed or neutered.
Fact: Many low cost options exist. Call your local animal shelter or one of the resources listed for information. The cost of providing appropriate care for just one litter of kittens is more than the cost of spaying/neutering, which is especially true if your pet experiences difficulties during pregnancy or birth.

Myth: Females should have one litter before spaying.
Fact: Every litter adds to the community burden of too many puppies or kittens. Studies have shown that female dogs and cats spayed before their first heat are generally healthier.

Myth: My dog will be less protective of my home and family.
Fact: Protecting home and family is instinctive behavior in a dog. Any particular dog's defense drive has more to do with breeding and training than with hormones.

Myth: My pet will get fat and lazy.
Fact: If the owner does not overfeed the animal and gives it enough exercise, this will not happen.

Myth: It is only one litter and I will find homes for them.
Fact: You only control that one litter. If a female cat and her offspring breed twice a year they could produce up to 420,000 cats over a seven year period. Only 1 in 12 of those will find a home. In six years, a female dog and her offspring can produce up to 67,000 puppies. A male cat or dog left to roam and breed can sire as many as 2,500 kittens or puppies in a single year.

Myth: I love my pet so much and want a kitten/puppy just like her/him.
Fact: Chances are that your pet's offspring will not be just like them in appearance, temperament or behavior.

Myth: Animals who are not spayed or neutered are healthier.
Fact: Unspayed female cats and dogs have a far greater chance of developing pyrometra (a fatal uterine infection), uterine cancer, and other cancers of the reproductive system. Many veterinarians now sterilize dogs and cats as young as eight weeks of age.
